Olga Mauger

Date of Last Contact: September 17, 1934

Missing From: Dubois, Wyoming

Missing Age: 21 Years Missing: 91

☐ Initial Entry

☐ Pending NamUs

NamUs # 27783

Circumstances:

Olga Mauger was last seen by her husband while they were elk hunting near Togwotee Pass in Wyoming on September 17, 1934.

Olga and her husband set up camp at the Floyd Stalnacker hunting lodge about 36 miles from Dubois, near the foot of Togwotee Pass. Olga's husband decided to hunt in an area that had never been opened to hunting before.

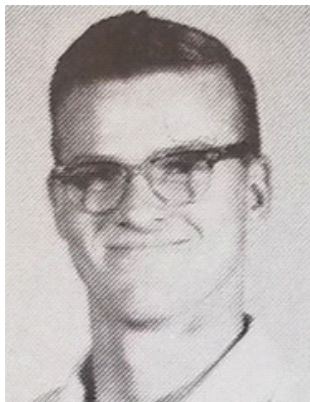

According to her husband, they started out from their camp, crossed the highway, and hiked into the mountains. Their destination was the top of a high rocky pass, accessible by a well-defined game trail. Olga became tired and told her husband to continue. Twenty minutes later, when he returned to the place he had last seen her, Olga was gone. It was reported she was carrying three sandwiches with her but no blankets or camping equipment. It's believed Olga had apparently started in the direction her husband had gone, then became confused and lost her way.

Experienced American Indian trackers pointed out that although the country was rugged, the area she was last seen was open and Olga would have been in full view of where her husband claimed he left his wife until he reached a small path where he said he turned around and retraced his steps. The trackers also stated footprints found 8 miles from the spot where Olga was last seen were not hers.

Olga's husband was questioned and denied they quarreled before her disappearance, or he knew why she may have left. Three days after she went missing, heavy snow forced the searchers to abandon the mountains. No trace of Olga has ever been found. Contrary to reports, her lunch sack, hand ax, nor her tam were ever found.

Olga's husband filed for divorce seven years after she went missing and married his high school sweetheart.

Years Missing: 49

NamUs # 14835

Circumstances:

On May 23, 1976, five days prior to his disappearance, Paul, a geologist with Berge Exploration, received a phone call from a man purporting to work for Paul's boss. The man told Paul he needed his work truck and asked him to bring it to Gillette. Paul believed the phone call to be a hoax and reported it to his boss, who confirmed his suspicions.

On May 28, Paul and his work truck disappeared while Paul was on a routine geological exploration trip in the Gillette area. The truck, used to locate deposits of uranium, oil shale, coal, and other minerals, contained $30,000 in radioactive material.

On August 20, after receiving an anonymous tip, authorities found Paul's work truck three miles north of Upton. The truck was parked in a timbered area near a number of water pits. The truck contained around $20,000 of Paul's equipment and appeared to have been parked there for some time. Inside, blood was found soaked into the seat and floor mats. The FBI was able to type the blood, but they were unable to turn up any records indicating Paul's blood type to verify if it was his.

In January 1977, a man pled guilty to grand larceny. He admitting to stealing almost $10,000 of Paul's equipment and insisted Paul cooperated in the theft. Police suspect foul play in Paul's disappearance.

On August 11, hikers saw a woman who matched the description of Celeste walking normally towards an unnamed lake between Misty Moon Lake and Gunboat Lake near Florence Pass. The hikers were too far away from her to call out to her.

Her family refuted claims Celeste and her husband were having marital problems, and she was under emotional distress. Celeste had been very excited about the trip and had been involved in the planning stages for quite a while.

Despite extensive searches by bloodhounds, helicopters, horses, and experienced trackers, no sign of Celeste was found in the rugged wilderness terrain, and by the end of August, searchers were called off.

NamUs # 81

Circumstances:

David Lovely was last seen in the vicinity of County Road 201 in Fort Bridger.

The story of Lovely's disappearance is baffling. Although the last time his family heard from him was August 5, 1985, the case didn't come to the Sweetwater County Sheriff's Office until nine days later when some campers found his abandoned burgundy 1978 Yamaha motorcycle near Baxter Road.

Lovely had become separated from his family during a cross-country move. According to police reports, Lovely's mother was driving a large U-Haul truck and he was driving the motorcycle. They stopped every 30 miles to check on David. When they got to Evanston, Lovely's mother and sister wanted to stop but he wanted to keep going. He left the two, telling them he would wait for them at a rest stop further east. They never saw him again.

The last time he was heard from was when he called his aunt. He told her he had had trouble with his motorcycle and pushed it into the Bingo Truck Stop in Fort Bridger. A "rough looking" man on a motorcycle worked on the bike and "fixed it better than it was," Lovely told his aunt. He also told her he was afraid of the man who fixed the motorcycle.

The family and authorities rode to the area where the motorcycle was found with ATVs and searched all around. The keys were left in the bike, and it had a half tank of gas. It was in running condition. However, no sign of Lovely was ever found.

After her disappearance, Kathleen's daughter found her mother's diary and gave it to the police. According to the diary, Kathleen had been dating Pack.

Pack had been paroled from prison a few years earlier. He had served a twelve- to fourteen-year sentence for aggravated rape and kidnapping, and was a suspect in more than 30 rapes reported in the Jackson, Wyoming area between 1974 and 1975.

About a year after she went missing, Pack's parole was revoked after he was arrested on weapons charges and he spent another year in prison before being released again. In 2018, he was sentenced to eight to twelve years in prison after some old evidence was located and tested for DNA, tying him to two unsolved rapes. Circumstances:

Bush was last seen in Casper, Wyoming on December 8, 1990.

Lynn was reported missing by her husband, on December 9, 1990. He stated he had last seen her the day before, when she went to the Buttrey's grocery store on 12th and Beverly in Casper, Wyoming. She never returned home.

The next day, the husband found her pickup truck, a 1985 Ford with vanity license plates reading 1T-Bush, in the parking lot with the door ajar and the keys on the ground. A receipt inside the vehicle showed Lynn had purchased groceries at 17:30 on December 8. The husband stated he did not report his wife missing sooner because he thought she had left of her own volition to get back at him for his marital infidelities.

Lynn was declared legally dead in 1999.

In August 2006, the husband was charged with first-degree murder in connection with his Lynn's disappearance. Authorities stated they had uncovered new evidence which lead to the charges. Among other things, Lynn's blood was found in the family's pickup truck and in a vodka bottle inside the house. The husband had allegedly made incriminating statements to others, speaking of having Lynn's body in a freezer and telling cellmates in jail that he had beaten and shot his wife. After Lynn's disappearance, his girlfriend moved into the Bush home and forged Lynn's name on legal documents. A person who served with the husband in the National Guard said the husband had taken several items from the unit, including two body bags, around the time Lynn disappeared.

Amanda had moved to the area only about six weeks prior to her disappearance. At the time, investigators believed she'd run away with her 20-year-old boyfriend, Patrick Ghering. When questioned about Amanda's disappearance, Ghering said he had last seen her at 7:15 a.m. the day she vanished. Police believed he was concealing her.

Ghering was last seen in Gillette, Wyoming on October 19, 1997. His fourteen-year-old girlfriend, Amanda Gallion, disappeared on October 13. When questioned about Amanda's disappearance, Ghering said he had last seen her at 7:15 a.m. the day she vanished. Police believed he was concealing her.

Six days later, Ghering also disappeared. His vehicle was found abandoned on the wrong side of the road, facing the wrong direction. He was never seen again.

Ghering's Social Security number hasn't been used since his disappearance, and neither has Amanda's, indicating that neither of them have gotten jobs, credit cards or driver's licenses. Daniels was last seen in Yavapai County, Arizona. He was helping a friend move from Nevada to Mississippi. They were driving in separate vehicles through Arizona when, at around sunset on August 21, one of the vehicles got a flat tire between Kingman and Wickenburg on U.S. Highway 93.

Daniels stayed behind with a trailer, a boxer truck and his dog, a brown and white spaniel named Penny, while his friend drove to fix the tire. The friend went to Wickenburg, but as it was too late to get any service, he had to wait until morning. When he drove back to where he had left Daniels, Daniels was gone.

Four witnesses saw Daniels between 3:00 and 4:00 a.m. on August 22, on the side of the highway. He was apparently disoriented. By the time an Arizona State Trooper arrived at the scene at 4:30 a.m., Daniels was gone. The trooper saw the dog, Penny, but Penny ran off into the desert.

Daniels has never been heard from again. He may be driving a white international box truck with no license plates, the words "Got Milk" on the back and the words "Liberty Distribution" on the sides.

He is from Jackson, Wyoming, and Wyoming police are assisting with the investigation into his disappearance. The circumstances of his disappearance are unclear.
